

ANTENUPTIAL CONTRACT AND WILL DRAFTING SERVICES

At SchoemanLaw Inc., we believe that the three cornerstones of a well-planned union are: your wedding vows, an antenuptial contract and a properly planned and professionally drafted will.

ANTENUPTIAL CONTRACTS

An antenuptial contract is an essential document that, under South Africa law, determines whether your marriage will exist in community of property or out of community of property, with or without accrual system.

In addition, securing your future through this important document offers a number of benefits by, for example:

- Preventing your intended marriage from automatically being in community of property
- Offering transparency in your relationship by recording the rights, duties and consequences (legal and proprietary) of your marriage
- Preventing unnecessary disputes with your spouse later down the line

WILLS

We strongly recommend that couples execute wills simultaneously with the execution of their antenuptial contract. A will or testament is a legal document that regulates what happens to a person's estate (assets and liabilities) after his or her death. Importantly, it also regulates the maintenance and care of your minor children and other dependents, who may inherit from you.

In addition, securing your future through this important document offers a number of benefits by, for example:

- Ensuring clarity and transparency for your loved ones regarding your wishes
- Providing for your chosen heirs, dependents and other beneficiaries
- Easing the administration of estates process
